The wind of changes

Once there lived a man called Charlie Puth. He dedicated all his time to his job. Mr. Puth wasn't really into travelling but his two good friends Mary and Selena really enjoyed visiting new places.

One day Charlie came back from his work and suddenly realised that his life was so boring and monotonous. All he did was working with piles of dusty papers. That's why Charlie came to his friends' house to ask for a piece of advice and said: "Hey, girls! I think it's time for me to change my lifestyle. Where should I begin?" Mary and Selena were so happy to hear that! They shouted in one voice: "Travelling!" It took them two hours to pack their things.

Selena was driving the car while the others were admiring beautiful sightscene. Three hours later they were standing near a high mountain. They were going to climb it. After three hours of climbing they finally reached the top of the mountain. The view was breathtaking! Then the travellers set up their tent and had a dinner. In the midnight a bear attacked the tent while every one was sleeping. Our travellers woke up from the noise and didn't know what to do. Selena realised that they were being attacked, took a heavy stick, ran out of the tent and hit the bear's paw. The scared bear ran away.

Despite of the fact that the journey was dangerous, Charlie and his friends still enjoyed each other's company. There is a suitable saying for this story: "A journey is best measured in friends rather than miles".
