THE WOLF ESCAPE

Sammy Anderson was on the third day of her journey in the Great Forest. The moon had already risen, and the wind was getting stronger with each second. Sammy held on to her backpack and hoped to soon find the shelter for the night.

As she walked through the forest, Anderson heard a sudden loud noise nearby. A moment, and a big grey wolf emerged from the darkness. It was ready to attack. Sammy broke a branch from the tree and threw it at the beast. It cracked it without any hesitation. Anderson panicked. She tried to escape, throwing more and more sticks at the wolf, but it was useless! Soon she was standing in a dead end. She cried for help as loud as she could. Sammy was not the one who loses hope so easily. Suddenly, a big man ran out from the depth of the forest. He scared the wolf off with a loud noise of a signal gun. Fully exhausted, Sammy fell on her knees.

"Are you alright miss?" - the man asked. She couldn't answer. "Poor girl. I must have scared you, too..." He helped her to stand up. For a minute they just stood in front of each other without talking. Finally, Sammy said: "Thank you, thank you so much! May I ask your name? I really want to know who my saviour is!"

"No problem, miss. My name is James Rickman, I work as a forest keeper here. My hut is nearby. If you want to, you can stay with me for the night. But first, what is your name?" "It's Sammy Anderson. Yes, I would love to! Thank you once again"

And they walked together, laughing and telling stories. After that night, Sammy Anderson finally realised that, a journey is best measured in friends rather than miles."
