'Home'

There once was a stray cat, who roamed the city streets. He never stayed in one place, for his life was nothing but constant running towards something. What was he looking for? He didn't know himself.

One night, a thunderstorm caught the cat off guard. As soon as he ran to hide in some backyard, he caught a whiff of a strange floral scent and felt something touching his tail. He turned around, hissing, but to no avail. ~~The~~ A plump cream-colored cat continued sniffing at him. "Hi! I'm Charlie and this is my house! What's your name?" - the younger cat meowed with excitement.

"... I don't have one," - our hero answered, confused. He was a stray cat, after all. "Then let's give you one!" - Charlie purred, - "I'll call you Spot, like the white spot on your nose!" Both of them chuckled before hearing Charlie's owners calling him home.

Charlie begged the stray to come with him and Spot reluctantly agreed. Maybe, he was looking for a home all along? But weeks later, he felt the loneliness eating away at him. He would tell Charlie stories about all the cats he had met while travelling - it was the sudden, short-lived companionships that he missed so dearly.

One night, both cats were out walking in the backyard - their owners didn't let them walk anywhere else. Suddenly, Charlie asked:

- "If you miss everyone, why not just go?"

- "Well, you're my best friend, and I don't want to leave you alone."

- "But if I leave too, will you take me with you?"

Spot purred softly, and his whiskers twitched happily.

- "Surely."

The next day, both of them were gone. Spot promised to introduce Charlie to every cat he knows and meet many new friends along the way. Charlie didn't regret leaving - Spot's friendship was enough to make him feel ~~like~~ at home. As they say, a journey is best measured in friends rather than miles.
