A life-changing journey

Mike was an ordinary guy who absolutely loved travelling. He had been in almost every country in South and North America, so he decided to visit other continents. Europe had always attracted Mike, but the sights and culture of Russia had fascinated him most of all. Mike wanted to feel the cold weather of Siberia and see its nature, so his first destination ~~was Omsk~~ was Omsk.

After his arrival, Mike checked in the hotel. He decided to ~~not~~ go out. He didn't really want to see any sights or go to the museums so he was just walking along the streets and observing the people of Omsk and some other tourists like him. It was already dark when Mike decided to return to the hotel.

Suddenly Mike saw a young woman. She has been followed ^{Gr} by a man in a black clothing. When the woman decided to speed up and go faster, the man went faster too. Mike decided to help the woman. He came up to her and said: "Hi, sister! Did you buy the dress you wanted?" The woman decided to play along: "~~Yes~~ Yes, it looks really pretty!" "Let's go home" - said Mike. The woman ^{Pun sp} nodded and they went to the hotel. The man who had been following the woman turned around and went away.

^{Gr} Later the woman said that her name was Lisa. She had ^{Gr} lived in Omsk for ten years and she liked this city. Lisa didn't know the man who had been following her and she was frightened. Lisa thanked Mike and they became great friends. Mike decided to stay in Omsk and live with Lisa. ~~He~~ Many years later he said: "A journey is best measured ~~in~~ in friends rather than miles!"
