My proposal to the School's planning committee regarding library expansion.

I. Introduction and the idea of mine.

Greetings. I am a 9th grade student and at the same time a frequent ~~reader~~ visitor of the school's library. As you can guess, I read a lot, so I was delighted to hear that the library will be having its much needed expansion. The library's condition bothers me in the first place greatly, so lately I was pondering about the way to improve it. And, as a result, I am proposing you my idea: the school library's own site.

II. About the site.

The site's design should be elegant and simple, as well as not too colorful (It's the library after all). The site's main goal is to provide information. It could store information about all the books in the library, and in whose hands are they at the moment. This will help librarians and readers to see if any book is lost or forgotten. The site could also feature a list of the most frequently taken books as well as a leaderboard of the most avid readers. This will encourage and help new readers. And lastly, the site could also show newly added books. That way it would help those who already read everything they wanted, to find new books to read.

III. Difficulties.

First of all, to make such a site one would need to have at least some knowledge about web-programming. You can either hire such a person, or make it a school project or a competition. Secondly, to host a site a server is needed, albeit not a powerful one in this case. Buying a server won't be really expensive, but it is a spenditure nonetheless.

IV. Conclusion.

So that is it for my proposal. Please take it seriously, and write me back after you decide whether to implement my idea or not. Thank you for attention.

My proposal to the School's planning committee ^{sp} regarding library expansion.

I. Introduction and the idea of mine. ^{Punct.}

^{Style} Greetings. I am a 9th grade student and at the same time a frequent ~~reader~~ ^{Gr} visitor of the school's library. As you can guess, I read a lot, so I was delighted to hear that the library will be having its much needed expansion. The library's ^{Gr} condition bothers me ~~in the first place~~ greatly, so lately I was pondering about the way to improve it. And, as a result, I am proposing you my idea: the school library's own site.

^{Gr} II. About the site.

^{Style} The site's design should be elegant and simple, as well as not too colorful. ¹⁰⁰ It's the library after all. The site's main goal is to provide information. It could store information about all the books ~~in the library~~, and in whose hands ~~are they~~ ^{at the moment}. This will help librarians and ~~readers~~ ^{all} to see if any book is lost or forgotten. The site could also feature ^{lex} a list of the most frequently taken books as well as a leader board of the most avid readers. This will encourage and help new readers. And lastly, the site could also show newly added books. That way it would help those, ²⁰⁰ who already read everything they wanted, to find new books to read.

^{Gr} III. Difficulties.

First of all, to make such a site one would need ^{posses} to have at least some knowledge about web-programming. You can either hire such a person, or make it a school project or a competition. Secondly, to host a site a server is needed, albeit not a powerful one ²⁵⁰ in this case. Buying a server won't be really expensive, but it is a spenditure nonetheless.

IV. Conclusion.

So that is it for my proposal. Please take it seriously, and write me back after you decide whether to implement my idea or not. Thank you for attention.
