ANSWER SHEET 10-19

The wonders of the mundane

I - Pleasure to meet you, Jane. You've come here to give us an interview.
~~It's great to see you.~~ So, to start, what brought you back here?

JB - Well, to put it simply, I want my story to be accurate and feel real. This place was also my hometown, and thus, holds a lot of memories, dear to me.

I - How touching! Miss Baker, what are your thoughts on changes in town?

JB - To start, I'm glad they didn't renovate any places, where my story takes place, like underground abandoned facilities.

I - We have those in town?!

JB - ~~Yes~~ yes actually. They date back to World War, in my childhood there were quite a few scary stories about them. Back to the point, however, the changes around here are pleasant. I'm happy for the youth that'd grow in this town.

I - Would there be any real people mentioned in your new story?

JB - Not necessarily people, but some of the characters will take heavy inspiration from my childhood friends and other important figures in my childhood.

I - And now, Miss Baker, can we get a little sneak peek about the book?

JB - I knew you'd ask me this! I can reveal the title of the book and some things about the plot. So, the book is called "The wonders of the mundane" and it's a collection of stories from my childhood, where ordinary things get their own unique charm.

I - Wow! That's quite surprising! Can you give an advice to the readers?

JB - Follow your dreams, kids!!
